In bringing together this first exhibition of our second quarter-century, we have aimed to secure, whenever possible, pictures completed during the present summer, in the case of present day painters, and those not previously exhibited, in the case of artists no longer living.

Because a good many of our men do not complete their work until their return to their winter studios, it has not been possible in every case, to adhere to our intention, but pictures like Mr. Volk's "Little Canadienne" and Mr. Tryon's "A Clearing---October"---to mention but two of the already well-known canvases included---lose nothing by being seen again.

We hope that the character of the collection as a whole will make a strong appeal to the old as well as to the new friends of this Gallery.
