FOREWORD

*N*EW YORK GALLERY visitors are apt to get the impression that all worth-while American artists are New Yorkers. Our private galleries for the most part are filled to over-flowing with local talent, and in the larger exhibitions the occasional outside name fails to make the impression that it often deserves.

In the Guild of Boston Artists are a number of painters whose work is so seldom shown outside of Boston, that it is almost unknown except to the most careful observers in the big academies and museums. Some of these we have assembled in the present exhibition in the hope that our own visitors may give them a response sufficiently cordial to warrant their more frequent appearance with us.
