FOREWORD

OUR present three-man show offers wide diversity. In re-introducing Arthur Meltzer and Jay Connaway, we are simply showing the development that has come to two of our younger painters since their last showing with us. Arthur Meltzer has continued his interpretations of eastern Pennsylvania with increasing confidence in his medium and with a surer knowledge of the forms about him. Jay Connaway has gained much from his two years' stay on the coast of Brittany, as his important marine in the present Academy exhibition, as well as these shown here, bear ample witness.

It is a delight to welcome one of our oldest friends as a third exhibitor at this time. For many years, Mr. Gest has been the honored director of the Cincinnati Museum. Since his retirement from official duties a year or so ago, he has gone back to his old love of painting, learned a good many years ago in company with Duveneck, Twachtman, Dielman, Currier and Blum. These delightful pastel notes are done for his own enjoyment, to record quickly passing phases of nature as seen in his immediate vicinity. We feel sure that the evident pleasure he had in their making will be shared by our visitors.
