

SPECIAL EXHIBITION OF PAINTINGS

BY

E. W. REDFIELD

MARCH 3rd :: 23rd, 1925

*AT THE GALLERIES OF WILLIAM MACBETH, INC.
15 EAST 57th STREET
NEW YORK CITY*

Foreword

How many times we have heard a gallery visitor say that he would like to own one of Mr. Redfield's pictures but that they were too large to hang on home walls!

Such reference has been to the exhibition canvases by which, almost exclusively, he has been known to the New York public. During the many years that he has been a contributor and a prize winner in the big exhibitions throughout the country, he has only once before held a one-man show in New York, and that was long ago.

In response to our inquiry as to whether he had smaller pictures that were thoroughly representative, his answer was "come and see." The acceptance of the invitation, with enthusiastic co-operation on Mr. Redfield's part, led to the formation of the collection that we now have the privilege of showing. These canvases are typical of his best work, and in their comparative space restrictions, they have suffered no loss in the power, the truth, or the beauty that we have always associated with Mr. Redfield's art.
